

BODY-SWAPPING WITH LINDA STEIN'S SCULPTURE

Body-Swapping with Linda Stein's sculptural Knights of Protection is a chance to be brave, an opportunity to dare. The experience of not only touching, but wearing her sculptures, allows the mind to take on another persona, to switch genders, to dance or move in a way unlikely without the overlay of Stein's body armor.

Allow yourself to be surrounded by Linda Stein's life-size Knights of Armor, made from wood, metal, stone, paper, or a fusion of all. See how she references the World War II comics of Wonder Woman, the heroic courage of anime's young warrior, Mononoke, and the compassion and justice of the Asian Goddess Kannon/Guan-yin.

Hear Stein explain her art as she encourages you to feel the textural surfaces by placing these torsos upon your shoulders. After watching a brief performance by a professional dancer wearing Stein's sculpture, the urge to have this armor become your "second-skin" will be irresistible.
